

Parents' Charter

Meriden values the partnership that exists between the School and the home. Students whose parents support the values, ethos and policies of the School benefit from this support and are more likely to thrive at Meriden.

By the time a girl leaves Meriden at the end of Year 12, it is hoped that she will be a:

- Confident, articulate and responsible leader
- Aspiring and academic achiever
- Well-informed and critical thinker
- Well-rounded and resilient team-player
- Creative innovator and collaborative problem-solver
- Compassionate, healthy and optimistic global citizen
- Woman of integrity, appreciative of the Christian faith.

By enrolling their daughters at Meriden, parents are committing to developing a positive partnership with our School through their:

Commitment to education

- sending their daughters to School each school day unless the girls are unwell.
- sending their daughters to School each day in the required school uniform.
- working positively and openly with school staff, thereby fostering a spirit of goodwill, cooperation and support.
- supporting the educational and Christian ethos and values of the School.

Thoughtful actions

- behaving respectfully and courteously at all times towards the School's staff, students and other parents.
- behaving ethically and thoughtfully when attending school functions.
- displaying exemplary sportsmanship at all times.
- supporting the discipline policy of the School and its code of conduct.
- keeping the School informed of any relevant changes to the girls' personal circumstances including behavioral, educational, personal, physical and mental health needs.
- not involving the School in parenting disputes or expecting the School to act as a mediator between estranged parents.

Loyalty to the School

- representing the School positively in public forums, either formally or informally.
- maintaining a relationship with the School that is one of trust and cooperation.
- paying school fees in a timely manner.
- contributing, where possible, to the school community.